- The woman in the photo is dressed for work. What is her job?
- Do you think her job needs a degree from a university? Why or why not?
- How much money do you think she earns?

Read and Understand

May is a 24-year-old woman with two jobs. Does she like her jobs? Listen to her story.

I hate my day job—I'm a waitress. It's boring. The same thing, day after day after day. Taking orders from customers, smiling, being polite even when I don't like the people.

I really don't like my night job, either—I'm an "escort." But it's not boring, like my day job, and the pay is great! Men pay me to be their dates. They take me to dinners, concerts, bars—everywhere. I work hard, four nights a week. And I work on the weekends.

I started my night job without really thinking about being an escort. One day at lunch-hour rush, one of the customers in the restaurant asked me for a date. I don't know why, but I accepted his invitation. That night, he took me to an expensive restaurant. And after dinner, we went to a concert. And later, he gave me a lot of money to pay for my time. He wasn't handsome—he was actually quite a bit older than me, and not in very good shape.

Why am I an escort? To earn money. That's all. And I earn a lot of money every year. I use the money to buy nice clothes and to travel. And last year, I bought my parents a new house. They think I am only a waitress, so they were pretty surprised.

Do I like being an escort? Well, it's just my night job. There are always men who want to pay to be with beautiful women. So I have all the dates I want. And, well, I'll confess, it's kind of fun to realize the power that a young attractive woman has over most men.

Someday, I will get married and have children—just like other women. And my job as an escort will be something of the past. I won't tell my future husband. But until that day comes, I am going to continue with my day job and my night job.

What would you do for money?

Who said these?

Iris: It's wrong for women to have dates with men for money.

Mark: A woman can do anything she wants.

Anna: It's OK for men or women to be escorts.

Shingo: A man should find a real date, not an escort.

So what if a woman works as an escort?
Some women also pay to get male escorts sometimes.

It's pathetic for a man to pay just to get a date.

Women are just as powerful as men nowadays.

Women shouldn't get paid for their company.

People should have honorable jobs they can be proud of.

Today, women have the freedom to choose what kind of career to have.

Task: Choose a job from the list that you would most likely do and explain your reason for choosing it:

- nude model
- drug dealer
- erotic dancer
