Dialogue 3:

Asking about the written test

Dialogue 4:

Talking about the driving test

Dialogue 1: Asking how to get a driver's license

A: I need to get a driver's license.

B: Don't you already have one?

A: Not yet. I've been busy settling down in LA since I came to the States. Do you know how to get one?

B: It's pretty simple. You have to go to the nearest DMV and sit for a written test and a driving test.

A: Is the driving test hard?

B: I don't think so. But you need to learn traffic laws before you take the tests.

A: Where can I learn the traffic laws?

B: I think you'd better go to a driving school. Otherwise it might be difficult.

Dialogue 2: Asking about driving lessons

A: Max, I'm looking for a driving school to prepare for the driving test.

Can you recommend one?

B: There's Orange Driving School next to Central Mall. I think this place is the best.

A: Oh! It's very easy for me to get there. My apartment is very close to Central Mall. By the way, how many driving lessons do I need to take to pass the driving test?

B: Did you drive when you were in Korea?

A: Of course. I've been driving for more than 8 years.

B: Then two or three lessons will do.

Dialogue 3: Asking about the written test

A: I need some books to study for my driver's license.

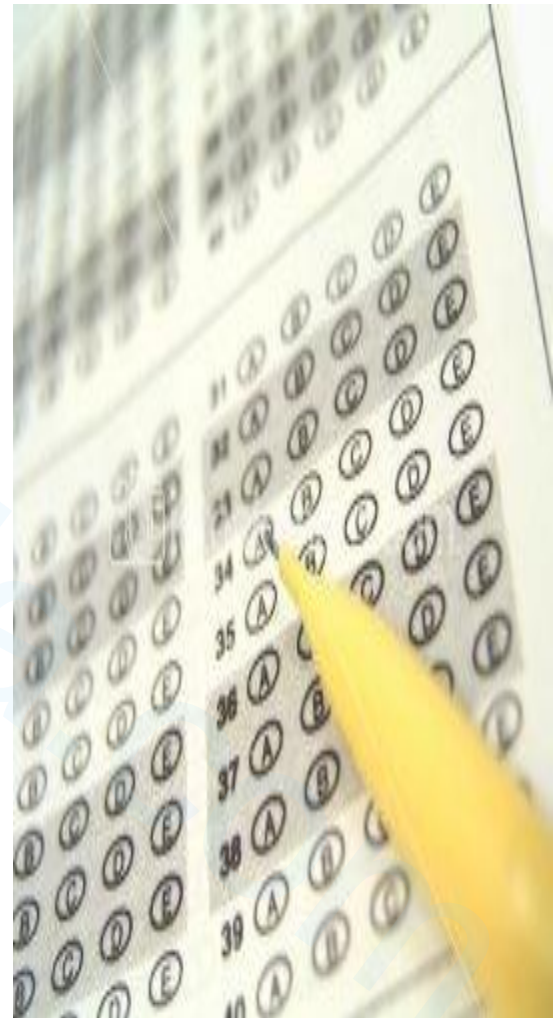

B: Oh! Well, you should check out Barnes and Nobles if you want books. But I think you can get a useful booklet at a DMV.

A: Thanks. Is there anything you can tell me about studying for the test?

B: You just have to memorize a bunch of things. Its not really hard, though. Knowing what the road signs mean, things like that. You probably have to know some of the traffic laws, too.

A: How long do you think it will take to study?

B: I'm not sure. But I think you should study for at least 5 hours.

Dialogue 4: Talking about the driving test

A: I have butterflies in my stomach.

B: Why?

A: I'm taking my driving test tomorrow.

B: Don't worry about it. It's not such a big deal.

A: But what if I make a mistake?

B: Trust me, you won't. I've never heard of anyone failing in the driving test. Just keep calm and concentrate on the road.

A: Anything else?

B: I think parallel parking was the hardest part of the test for me. And Don't forget to turn your chest to see the back of your car when you drive backward.
